The Manufacture of Steel.

[From the Journal of Commerce.]

The question whether good steel can be supplied at moderate prices for machinery, tires, car-wheels, railroad bars, etc., in place of iron, is engaging the attention of scientific and practical men in all quarters of the globe, but especially in the United States and England. A test of several years in the latter country has successfully shown that the durability of steel rails is many times greater than that of iron, ensuring greater safety, higher speed and easier transition. The chief objections, however, to its general use hitherto have been, first, the great expense of its manufacture; and, secondly, the difficulty of obtaining iron that is suitable for the purpose. Those ores only that are pure, and contain a portion of manganese, are capable of producing a fine steel. But it is seldom that iron ore which meets the requirements is found in large quantities. Hence, up to the present time only a small amount of good steel has been produced. The quantity of steel manufactured in England in 1853 did not exceed 40,000 tons. This was made by what is known as the "Cementation process." It consists in exposing the iron, buried in charcoal, to long continued heat. The operation is conducted in a furnace resembling externally that used in glass manufacture, in the base of which, under an arch, are set two horizontal troughs made of fire slabs, each of them from eight to fifteen feet long, and from twenty-six to thirty-six inches wide and deep. In these troughs are placed the iron bars to be converted into steel, and pulverized hard-wood charcoal mixed with salt is then sifted over them, preparatory to the heat which is to be applied. This process, however, is long, tedious and expensive, and the iron used has to be imported into England from the Danemora mine in Sweden, at a cost of from £30 to £35 per ton. It is from this celebrated ore that all the fine steel is now made. It contains the right per centage of manganese, is entirely free from sulphur and phosphorus—and consequently is considered indispensable in the manufacture of superior steel.

Since 1850 various modes of making steel at less expense have been introduced, but none, up to a recent date, has been received so favorably as that which is known by the name of "Bessemer," or the "Pneumatic process." Common pig-iron contains three to four per cent. of carbon; steel from one to one and a half per cent. By this process, when first introduced, pig-iron was decarbonized by it to the steel point and cast into ingots. To stop the operation at the right moment was very difficult, and it was consequently found that in the majority of cases the product was very uncertain, it being, oftentimes, nothing more than steelified iron, with many of the impurities of the iron remaining. This process nevertheless gained ground slowly, although much opposed by the regular steel manufacturers, until 1860, when the complete decarbonization of the iron, and afterward its carbonization to the required point, by the introduction of the Franklinite iron of New Jersey, was adopted. By this means the iron was purified in a much greater degree than by the old process, and the proper amount of carbon introduced with greater regularity. The high price of the Franklinite, however, after 1861, prevented further shipments to England, and the "Spiegel Eisen" of Germany is now used in that country for that purpose. This contains about the same amount of carbon as the Franklinite (five per cent.), but no manganese; while the Franklinite has upward of four per cent. of this material, making it the best carboniser for this process yet discovered. It is, in fact, a "super-steel." From 1860, the quality of steel made by this process has been improved, and its manufacture so increased in England and on the continent of Europe, that the inventor is said to be receiving £100,000 yearly for the use of his invention. In this respect he affords a striking contrast to Cort, the inventor of the puddling process, who died in 1850, poor and broken-hearted. The increase in the manufacture, since the process has been fairly tried, has been very great, the amount turned out in 1866 being estimated at 250,000 tons in England alone.

This process has already been introduced into the United States, and some fine specimens have been produced, but as yet the manufacture is limited, owing to the great difficulty of finding the suitable pig-iron to work with. The inventor, Bessemer, states that pig-iron which contains over one-tenth of one per cent. of sulphur, or seventy-five thousandths of one per cent. of phosphorus, or one and three-quarters of one per cent. of silicon, is not well adapted to his process. And as most of the American pig-iron is made with anthracite coal, which contains more or less sulphur, and the magnetic ores contain a great portion of sulphur and phosphorus, they are generally unsuitable. The opinion of scientific men, therefore, at the present time, is not in favor of the "Bessemer process" until more suitable pig-iron can be obtained.

But a more recent invention in the art, and one which, according to the claims of its friends, is likely, on the ground of economy, to take precedence of all others, is that known as the "Hydrogen process." The best ore for the operation seems to be that found in inexhaustible quantities in New Jersey under the name of Franklinite. This contains about fifty-five per cent. of oxide of iron, eighteen per cent. of oxide of zinc, and fifteen per cent. of manganese, a remarkable and unique compound, making it the natural flux and purifier of iron when combined with hydrogen in the blast furnace, in the proportion of ten to fifteen per cent. with magnetic ores. The zinc unites with sulphur or phosphorus in the ore, and both passed off in a volatil form. The increase of heat produced by the use of hydrogen metalizes, at the same time, a large proportion of the manganese, and thus turns out a quantity of refined iron suitable for the manufacture of superior steel. The refining process can be carried still further, until, instead of a carbonate, a pure hydrate of iron is obtained, which, being run into a converting furnace and carbonized, is cast into ingots of steel of a form and size, suitable for welding into rails. This process is said to be so expeditious and simple, that the product of the furnaces will be nearly as great of steel as of pig-iron by the ordinary method.

The "hydrogen process" is now in successful operation in Europe, and it is stated by experienced iron-masters, who have tried all kinds of furnaces and with different sorts of fuel, that the saving in that article is thirty-three and a third per cent. This process has been repeatedly tried in the United States, but as only limestone could be obtained as a flux, it was but partially successful. The recent discovery, however, of the Franklinite will probably obviate this difficulty, for, by using this as a flux, with a small proportion of limestone, the slag is kept thin to protect the iron, and the result is, an iron superior for the purposes of steel to any that has heretofore been manufactured. These processes, will, it is understood, be soon again put into operation in this country on a large scale, and seem likely to afford a satisfactory solution to the question of an abundant supply of good steel at reasonable rates. They will also develop those valuable mineral deposits that have so long lain dormant, simply because the proper way of working them had not been discovered.

Belgium, France and Germany are making rapid strides in the manufacture of iron and steel, and by this system have not only succeeded in supplying themselves, but in taking contracts at low rates in other countries. Nature, however, has done so much for this country in providing such materials as we have discovered, that Americans may not only learn to be independent of foreign importations of steel rails, but perhaps, not long hence, become exporters of steel themselves.

INDIANA DURING THE REBELLION.—The following resolution was introduced in the Indiana State Senate a short time since:

WHEREAS, On three several occasions during the existence of the rebellion the State of Indiana was invaded by the military forces of the so-called Confederate States of America, and during the same time the Southern border of the State was continually threatened from the same quarter, rendering it necessary that the militia in that part of the State should be held in constant readiness, and should be frequently called out to repel threatened invasion; and whereas, at the time of the arrest of Dodd, Mulligan, Bowles and Horsey, a deep and well-planned conspiracy existed on the part of the domestic traitors to muster an armed force in Indiana in aid of the rebellion; therefore,

Resolved, By the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, the House concurring, that at the time of the arrest, trial and conviction of Mulligan, Bowles and Horsey, a virtual state of war did, in point of fact, exist in Indiana, the opinion of a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 16th, 1867.

The President has moved at last before the tide of public sentiment. For weeks and months he has stood in the way of advancing civilization, and it was the opinion of some of his most intimate friends that he could not be made to stir. But the talk about impeachment, and the manifest unpopularity of his policy at the North, and the vehement advice of such men as Doolittle, Dixon, Thurlow Weed and even, Gov. Orr, of South Carolina, have moved him to action. Gov. Orr came on here a month ago with the object of counselling the President to take a step in advance—to meet at least half way the Northern sentiment. This Orr is a shrewd politician and possesses much sagacity. He was never a secessionist at heart—never believed in Jeff. Davis or the rebellion. He swam along easily with the tide, all the time on the watch for a chance to get ashore. Now Orr is shrewd enough to perceive which way the tide drifts at the North, and that the South will soon have hard times—when Mr. Johnson is out of the way. A month ago he saw something coming not unlike the bill reported from the Reconstruction Committee. He fears military law, thinking that foolish and excitable men will attempt to resist it, and then the war will be re-opened. A Southern man doesn't need to be as clear-headed as Gov. Orr to see what the fate of the South will be in a second war. She will not be merely beaten—she will be trampled under foot. So Orr and three or four other Southern Governors propose a new plan which includes the Congressional Amendment—and impartial suffrage. As many statements have been made on the subject, half of which were erroneous, let me give the exact plan as offered in the Senate by Mr. Dixon a day or two since:

"Whereas at the first session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, was proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, which said amendment has not been ratified by the States in which rebellion against the United States recently prevailed; and whereas there is reason to believe that the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States would, if proposed by Congress, be ratified by the Legislatures of said States; and whereas there is also reason to believe that the constitutions of said States will soon be amended by the voluntary action of the Legislatures and people thereof by the adoption of an article in substance as follows, namely:

ARTICLE—Every male citizen who has resided in this State for one year, and in the county in which he offers to vote six months immediately preceding the day of election, and can read the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and can write his own name, or may be the owner of $250 worth of taxable property, shall be entitled to vote at any election for Governor of the State, members of the Legislature, and all other officers elected by the people of the State; Provided, That no person by reason of this article shall be excluded from voting who has heretofore exercised the elective franchise under the constitution or laws of this State, or who at the time of the adoption of this amendment may be entitled to vote under said constitution and laws.

Now, therefore, in view of the above considerations and in the confident hope of an early fraternal restoration of the Union: Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc.

Then comes the resolution, and I propose to add to it this additional article:

ARTICLE —.

SEC. 1. The Union under the Constitution is and shall be perpetual. No State shall pass any law or ordinance to secede or withdraw from the Union, and any such law or ordinance shall be null and void.

SEC. 2. The public debt of the United States, authorized by law, shall ever be held sacred and inviolate, but neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the Government or authority of the United States.

SEC. 3. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and any of the States in which they reside. No State shall make and enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deprive any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of its laws.

SEC. 4. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when any State shall, on account of race or color, or previous condition of servitude, exclude from voting at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, members of the Legislature, and other officers elected by the people, any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, then the entire class of persons so excluded from the elective franchise shall not be counted in the basis of representation. And no State shall require as a property qualification for voters more than the value of $250 of taxable property, nor as an educational qualification more education than enough to enable the voter to read the Constitution of the United States in the English language and write his own name.

Now this is the plan exactly which the President urges the South to adopt, and at once. Mr. Dixon is a quiet man and is not given to bragging, but I happen to know that every word in this plan of his received the assent of the President. It is barely possible that the Southern Governors who have gone back may not like the change made since they left, in the first section of the second article. However they will succumb to the President's will on the subject as they are nothing without him.

There is naturally a good deal of curiosity to see how the Democrats will take the proposition. Jack Rogers, of New Jersey, a rampant Copperhead, intimated distinctly in the House, a day or two since, that he would accept the plan of adjustment. Jack was beaten in the fall campaign and he is a close follower upon the heels of the President ever since. Whatever the President will swallow Jack will affect a fondness for.

In the Senate, Mr. Salsbury came out roughly against the measure—somewhat to the surprise, I think, of Mr. Dixon. Here is what he said:

Sir, I know what the judgment of the country will be considering the intimate relations existing between the honorable Senator from Connecticut and the President of the United States; and that is, that this amendment will be considered an Administration measure. If so, I say for one—and I speak for the Democratic party of my State, and I think I can speak in behalf of one million eight hundred thousand Democrats in the non-seceding States—that that proposition will meet with no approval from them; and I trust in God that there is no Southern State, however menaced by Congressional authority, I had almost said Congressional tyranny, that will so degrade itself or be so untrue and unfaithful to the friends who have stood up for their Constitutional rights, as to adopt such a proposition as that. There is one State in this Union, although her electoral voice may not be very potential, that will never, under any circumstances, agree to it.

While I shall continue to support the President of the United States in all his Constitutional rights and in every measure of public policy which I believe to be right in itself and conducive to the good of my country, I will not under any circumstances be so unfaithful to my own convictions of duty, to my fidelity to the principles of the great and glorious party to which I belong, as to countenance for a moment such a proposition as that.

Then followed an interesting passage between Conness, of California, and Mr. Dixon:

Mr. CONNESS. I think this opportunity may not be allowed to pass without congratulating the country upon the prospect of the separation of the sheep from the goats. I will not say who are the sheep nor who are the goats. But I will add congratulation to the honorable Senator from Connecticut for the leave he has taken, after having strayed long from the right path, an his return to the fold. I think the prospect this morning is cheering and bright for the country. And in this connection I am very glad to hear the honorable Senator from Delaware say that, notwithstanding his emphatic dissent from the great proposition proposed this morning by the Senator from Connecticut, he will yet stand by the President in all that is right. With such a position from him as the leader of one party and such a proposition from the honorable Senator from Connecticut on the other side, I do not see but that the great passage that has yawned so deep and wide will be bridged over by due time, and that the country will be safe. Again I congratulate the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DIXON. I suppose, then, I may count the Senator's vote in favor of my amendment.

Mr. CONNESS. Unquestionably, after it shall be improved a little.

The country is watching this new movement with interest, and it would be idle to deny that it excites deep interest among the Radicals in Congress.

Oregon will perhaps feel some interest in the fact that the new bill from the Joint Committee on Reconstruction, and which has passed the House was originally drawn up by Senator Williams. In his bill the President was designated as the officer who shall appoint the commanders in the Military districts. The Committee bill delegates this power to General Grant. After Mr. Williams had got the bill referred to the Committee, it was speedily adopted. It is the only issue out of our present troubles and follows very closely the advice of the fighting Generals. Gen. Grant, who is phlegmatic, says: "The South needs a military government for a time." Sheridan, who has been here a few days, and who is very much of a lion, says: "It is not safe to withdraw the troops." Gen. Thomas says: "The black man cannot get justice at the South—we must enforce it with the bayonet." Congress moves to follow the advice of those Generals and make the President respect the blacks and the Union whites. But what if the Supreme Court declares the law to be unconstitutional? It is generally believed it will do so. Bingham, of Ohio, is certain that it will. Then we shall have another argument in favor of enlarging the Court. If it is determined to stand by the old Buchanan doctrines, then it must be "reconstructed." As for the President, the radicals say they will impeach him if he does'nt execute the law. It will give them a good ground for impeachment if the examination now going on shall fail of obtaining facts which warrant his impeachment.

The President unquestionably feels excited over this "military" plan of reconstruction, but consoles himself with the thought that the measure will tend to drive the obstinate rebels to the support of his plan. The contest between the two plans he thinks is startling, and altogether in his favor—or in favor of his scheme.

Some of the investigating committees are reporting to the House rather startling facts in connection with the manufacture of whiskey, and the general collection of taxes and duties. In Boston, half a dozen gentlemen connected with the Custom House divided $100,000 got out of importers who had got into trouble, and the Solicitor of the Treasury pocketed at least $4000 of it. And it is found that in New York and Philadelphia that assessors have been in the pay of the whiskey manufacturers—in one case the amount of the daily bribe to silence was not less than $100. To tell the whole truth, the amount of swindling which has been going on during the last year is enormous, and it certainly shows a lack of competency or integrity in the heads of departments. No doubt the high tax on whiskey is a terrible temptation to fraud, but it is not the slightest excuse for dishonesty on the part of Government officers. Big stealing is getting to be respectable. It is only your little contemptible theives who are despised. STEAMER DAY.

The Manufacture of Steel.

The question whether good steel can be supplied at moderate prices for machinery, tires, car-wheels, railroad bars, etc., in place of iron, is engaging the attention of scientific and practical men in all quarters of the globe, but especially in the United States and England. A test of several years in the latter country has successfully shown that the durability of steel rails is many times greater than that of iron, ensuring greater safety, higher speed and easier transition. The chief objections, however, to its general use hitherto have been, first, the great expense of its manufacture; and, secondly, the difficulty of obtaining iron that is suitable for the purpose. Those ores only that are pure, and contain a portion of manganese, are capable of producing a fine steel. But it is seldom that iron ore which meets the requirements is found in large quantities. Hence, up to the present time only a small amount of good steel has been produced. The quantity of steel manufactured in England in 1853 did not exceed 40,000 tons. This was made by what is known as the "Cementation process." It consists in exposing the iron, buried in charcoal, to long continued heat. The operation is conducted in a furnace resembling externally that used in glass manufacture, in the base of which, under an arch, are set two horizontal troughs made of fire slabs, each of them from eight to fifteen feet long, and from twenty-six to thirty-six inches wide and deep. In these troughs are placed the iron bars to be converted into steel, and pulverized hard-wood charcoal mixed with salt is then sifted over them, preparatory to the heat which is to be applied. This process, however, is long, tedious and expensive, and the iron used has to be imported into England from the Danemora mine in Sweden, at a cost of from £30 to £35 per ton. It is from this celebrated ore that all the fine steel is now made. It contains the right per centage of manganese, is entirely free from sulphur and phosphorus—and consequently is considered indispensable in the manufacture of superior steel.

Since 1850 various modes of making steel at less expense have been introduced, but none, up to a recent date, has been received so favorably as that which is known by the name of "Bessemer," or the "Pneumatic process." Common pig-iron contains three to four per cent. of carbon; steel from one to one and a half per cent. By this process, when first introduced, pig-iron was decarbonized by it to the steel point and cast into ingots. To stop the operation at the right moment was very difficult, and it was consequently found that in the majority of cases the product was very uncertain, it being, oftentimes, nothing more than steelified iron, with many of the impurities of the iron remaining. This process nevertheless gained ground slowly, although much opposed by the regular steel manufacturers, until 1860, when the complete decarbonization of the iron, and afterward its carbonization to the required point, by the introduction of the Franklinite iron of New Jersey, was adopted. By this means the iron was purified in a much greater degree than by the old process, and the proper amount of carbon introduced with greater regularity. The high price of the Franklinite, however, after 1861, prevented further shipments to England, and the "Spiegel Eisen" of Germany is now used in that country for that purpose. This contains about the same amount of carbon as the Franklinite (five per cent.), but no manganese; while the Franklinite has upward of four per cent. of this material, making it the best carbonizer for this process yet discovered. It is, in fact, a "super-steel." From 1860, the quality of steel made by this process has been improved, and its manufacture so increased in England and on the continent of Europe, that the inventor is said to be receiving £100,000 yearly for the use of his invention. In this respect he affords a striking contrast to Cort, the inventor of the puddling process, who died in 1850, poor and broken-hearted. The increase in the manufacture, since the process has been fairly tried, has been very great, the amount turned out in 1866 being estimated at 250,000 tons in England alone.

This process has already been introduced into the United States, and some fine specimens have been produced, but as yet the manufacture is limited, owing to the great difficulty of finding the suitable pig-iron to work with. The inventor, Bessemer, states that pig-iron which contains over one-tenth of one per cent. of sulphur, or seventy-five thousandths of one per cent. of phosphorus, or one and three-quarters of one per cent. of silicon, is not well adapted to his process. And as most of the American pig-iron is made with anthracite coal, which contains more or less sulphur, and the magnetic ores contain a great portion of sulphur and phosphorus, they are generally unsuitable. The opinion of scientific men, therefore, at the present time, is not in favor of the "Bessemer process" until more suitable pig-iron can be obtained.

But a more recent invention in the art, and one which, according to the claims of its friends, is likely, on the ground of economy, to take precedence of all others, is that known as the "Hydrogen process." The best ore for the operation seems to be that found in inexhaustible quantities in New Jersey under the name of Franklinite. This contains about fifty-five per cent. of oxide of iron, eighteen per cent. of oxide of zinc, and fifteen per cent. of manganese, a remarkable and unique compound, making it the natural flux and purifier of iron when combined with hydrogen in the blast furnace, in the proportion of ten to fifteen per cent. with magnetic ores. The zinc unites with sulphur or phosphorus in the ore, and both passed off in a volatil form. The increase of heat produced by the use of hydrogen metalizes, at the same time, a large proportion of the manganese, and thus turns out a quantity of refined iron suitable for the manufacture of superior steel. The refining process can be carried still further, until, instead of a carbonate, a pure hydrate of iron is obtained, which, being run into a converting furnace and carbonized, is cast into ingots of steel of a form and size, suitable for welding into rails. This process is said to be so expeditious and simple, that the product of the furnaces will be nearly as great of steel as of pig-iron by the ordinary method.

The "hydrogen process" is now in successful operation in Europe, and it is stated by experienced iron-masters, who have tried all kinds of furnaces and with different sorts of fuel, that the saving in that article is thirty-three and a third per cent. This process has been repeatedly tried in the United States, but as only limestone could be obtained as a flux, it was but partially successful. The recent discovery, however, of the Franklinite will probably obviate this difficulty, for, by using this as a flux, with a small proportion of limestone, the slag is kept thin to protect the iron, and the result is, an iron superior for the purposes of steel to any that has heretofore been manufactured. These processes, will, it is understood, be soon again put into operation in this country on a large scale, and seem likely to afford a satisfactory solution to the question of an abundant supply of good steel at reasonable rates. They will also develop those valuable mineral deposits that have so long lain dormant, simply because the proper way of working them had not been discovered.

Belgium, France and Germany are making rapid strides in the manufacture of iron and steel, and by this system have not only succeeded in supplying themselves, but in taking contracts at low rates in other countries. Nature, however, has done so much for this country in providing such materials as we have discovered, that Americans may not only learn to be independent of foreign importations of steel rails, but perhaps, not long hence, become exporters of steel themselves.

INDIANA DURING THE REBELLION.—The following resolution was introduced in the Indiana State Senate a short time since:

WHEREAS, On three several occasions during the existence of the rebellion the State of Indiana was invaded by the military forces of the so-called Confederate States of America, and during the same time the Southern border of the State was continually threatened from the same quarter, rendering it necessary that the militia in that part of the State should be held in constant readiness, and should be frequently called out to repel threatened invasion; and whereas, at the time of the arrest of Dodd, Mulligan, Bowles and Horsey, a deep and well-planned conspiracy existed on the part of the domestic traitors to muster an armed force in Indiana in aid of the rebellion; therefore,

Resolved, By the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, the House concurring, that at the time of the arrest, trial and conviction of Mulligan, Bowles and Horsey, a virtual state of war did, in point of fact, exist in Indiana, the opinion of a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10th, 1867.

The President has moved at last before the tide of public sentiment. For weeks and months he has stood in the way of advancing civilization, and it was the opinion of some of his most intimate friends that he could not be made to stir. But the talk about impeachment, and the manifest unpopularity of his policy at the North, and the vehement advice of such men as Doolittle, Dixon, Thurlow Weed and even, Gov. Orr, of South Carolina, have moved him to action. Gov. Orr came on here a month ago with the object of counseling the President to take a step in advance—to meet at least half way the Northern sentiment. This Orr is a shrewd politician and possesses much sagacity. He was never a secessionist at heart—never believed in Jeff. Davis or the rebellion. He swam along easily with the tide, all the time on the watch for a chance to get ashore. Now Orr is shrewd enough to perceive which way the tide drifts at the North, and that the South will soon have hard times—when Mr. Johnson is out of the way. A month ago he saw something coming not unlike the bill reported from the Reconstruction Committee. He fears military law, thinking that foolish and excitable men will attempt to resist it, and then the war will be re-opened. A Southern man doesn't need to be as clear-headed as Gov. Orr to see what the fate of the South will be in a second war. She will not be merely beaten—she will be trampled under foot. So Orr and three or four other Southern Governors propose a new plan which includes the Congressional Amendment—and impartial suffrage. As many statements have been made on the subject, half of which were erroneous, let me give the exact plan as offered in the Senate by Mr. Dixon a day or two since:

"Whereas at the first session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, was proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, which said amendment has not been ratified by the States in which rebellion against the United States recently prevailed; and whereas there is reason to believe that the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States would, if proposed by Congress, be ratified by the Legislatures of said States; and whereas there is also reason to believe that the constitutions of said States will soon be amended by the voluntary action of the Legislatures and people thereof by the adoption of an article in substance as follows, namely:

ARTICLE.—Every male citizen who has resided in this State for one year, and in the county in which he offers to vote six months immediately preceding the day of election, and can read the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and can write his own name, or may be the owner of $250 worth of taxable property, shall be entitled to vote at any election for Governor of the State, members of the Legislature, and all other officers elected by the people of the State: Provided, That no person by reason of this article shall be excluded from voting who has heretofore exercised the elective franchise under the constitution or laws of this State, or who at the time of the adoption of this amendment may be entitled to vote under said constitution and laws.

Now, therefore, in view of the above considerations and in the confident hope of an early fraternal restoration of the Union: Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, &c.

Then comes the resolution, and I propose to add to it this additional article:

ARTICLE —.

SEC. 1. The Union under the Constitution is and shall be perpetual. No State shall pass any law or ordinance to secede or withdraw from the Union, and any such law or ordinance shall be null and void.

SEC. 2. The public debt of the United States, authorized by law, shall ever be held sacred and inviolate, but neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the Government or authority of the United States.

SEC. 3. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and any of the States in which they reside. No State shall make and enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deprive any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of its laws.

SEC. 4. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when any State shall, on account of race or color, or previous condition of servitude, exclude from voting at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, members of the Legislature, and other officers elected by the people, any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, then the entire class of persons so excluded from the elective franchise shall not be counted in the basis of representation. And no State shall require as a property qualification for voters more than the value of $250 of taxable property, nor as an educational qualification more education than enough to enable the voter to read the Constitution of the United States in the English language and write his own name.

Now this is the plan exactly which the President urges the South to adopt, and at once. Mr. Dixon is a quiet man and is not given to bragging, but I happen to know that every word in this plan of his received the assent of the President. It is barely possible that the Southern Governors who have gone back may not like the change made since they left, in the first section of the second article. However they will succumb to the President's will on the subject as they are nothing without him.

There is naturally a good deal of curiosity to see how the Democrats will take the proposition. Jack Rogers, of New Jersey, a rampant Copperhead, intimated distinctly in the in the House, a day or two since, that he would accept the plan of adjustment. Jack was beaten in the fall campaign and he is a close follower upon the heels of the President ever since. Whatever the President will swallow Jack will affect a fondness for.

In the Senate, Mr. Salsbury came out roughly against the measure—somewhat to the surprise, I think, of Mr. Dixon. Here is what he said:

Sir, I know what the judgment of the country will be: considering the intimate relations existing between the honorable Senator from Connecticut and the President of the United States; and that is, that this amendment will be considered an Administration measure. If so, I say for one and I speak for the Democratic party of my State, and I think I can speak in behalf of one million eight hundred thousand Democrats in the non-seceding States—that that proposition will meet with no approval from them; and I trust in God that there is no Southern State, however menaced by Congressional authority, I had almost said Congressional tyranny, that will so degrade itself or be so untrue and unfaithful to the friends who have stood up for their Constitutional rights, as to adopt such a proposition as that. There is one State in this Union, although her electoral voice may not be very potential, that will never, under any circumstances, agree to it.

While I shall continue to support the President of the United States in all his Constitutional rights and in every measure of public policy which I believe to be right in itself and conducive to the good of my country, I will not under any circumstances be so unfaithful to my own convictions of duty, to my fidelity to the principles of the great and glorious party to which I belong, as to countenance for a moment such a proposition as that.

Then followed an interesting passage between Conness, of California, and Mr. Dixon:

Mr. CONNESS. I think this opportunity may not be allowed to pass without congratulating the country upon the prospect of the separation of the sheep from the goats. I will not say who are the sheep nor who are the goats. But I will add congratulation to the honorable Senator from Connecticut for the leave he has taken, after having strayed long from the right path, on his return to the fold. I think the prospect this morning is cheering and bright for the country. And in this connection I am very glad to hear the honorable Senator from Delaware say that, notwithstanding his emphatic dissent from the great proposition proposed this morning by the Senator from Connecticut, he will yet stand by the President in all that is right. With such a position from him as the leader of one party and such a proposition from the honorable Senator from Connecticut on the other side, I do not see but that the great passage that has yawned so deep and wide will be bridged over by due time, and that the country will be safe. Again I congratulate the Senator from Connecticut and the country.

Mr. DIXON. I suppose, then, I may count on the Senator's vote in favor of my amendment.

Mr. CONNESS. Unquestionably, after it shall be improved a little.

The country is watching this new movement with interest, and it would be idle to deny that it excites deep interest among the Radicals in Congress.

Oregon will perhaps feel some interest in the fact that the new bill from the Joint Committee on Reconstruction, and which has passed the House was originally drawn up by Senator Williams. In his bill the President was designated as the officer who shall appoint the commanders in the Military districts. The Committee bill delegates this power to General Grant. After Mr. Williams had got the bill referred to the Committee, it was speedily adopted. It is the only issue out of our present troubles and follows very closely the advice of the fighting Generals. Gen. Grant, who is phlegmatic, says: "The South needs a military government for a time." Sheridan, who has been here a few days, and who is very much of a lion, says: "It is not safe to withdraw the troops." Gen. Thomas says: "The black man cannot get justice at the South—we must enforce it with the bayonet." Congress moves to follow the advice of those Generals and make the President respect the blacks and the Union whites. But what if the Supreme Court declares the law to be unconstitutional? It is generally believed it will do so. Bingham, of Ohio, is certain that it will. Then we shall have another argument in favor of enlarging the Court. If it is determined to stand by the old Buchanan doctrines, then it must be "reconstructed." As for the President, the radicals say they will impeach him if he does'nt execute the law! It will give them a good ground for impeachment if the examination now going on shall fail of obtaining facts which warrant his impeachment.

The President unquestionably feels exalted over this "military" plan of reconstruction, but consoles himself with the thought that the measure will tend to drive the obstinate rebels to the support of his plan. The contest between the two plans he thinks is startling, and altogether in his favor—or in favor of his scheme.

Some of the investigating committees are reporting to the House rather startling facts in connection with the manufacture of whiskey, and the general collection of taxes and duties. In Boston, half a dozen gentlemen connected with the Custom House divided $100,000 got out of importers who had got into trouble, and the Solicitor of the Treasury pocketed at least $4000 of it. And it is found that in New York and Philadelphia that assessors have been in the pay of the whiskey manufacturers—in one case the amount of the daily bribe to silence was not less than $100. To tell the whole truth, the amount of swindling which has been going on during the last year is enormous, and it certainly shows a lack of competency or integrity in the heads of departments. No doubt the high tax on whiskey is a terrible temptation to fraud, but it is not the slightest excuse for dishonesty on the part of Government officers. Big stealing is getting to be respectable. It is only your little contemptible theives who are despised.

Let the Responsibility Rest where it Belongs

What the Civil Rights Act has to do with the Chinese labor question under the present state of things on the Pacific coast, or what connection the act will have with this question under any state of things that may exist hereafter, is not obvious to men who view the matter with dispassionate judgment, however clear it may be to interested agitators and seedy politicians These latter classes of persons having exhausted every other source of political agitation, and having miserably failed in all their efforts to establish their reputation as wise counselors whom the people would do well to intrust with their highest interests, are now turning their attention to the Chinese labor question as the only remaining mine which promises anything for working. In their estimation it is not worth while to discuss a subject when the discussion cannot be turned to political account, so they are trying to connect this matter with party politics and make it a hobby on which they may ride into power. The Civil Rights Act is said to be the cause of the whole trouble, and those who enacted it are to be held responsible for the presence of this heathen multitude in the Pacific States. In other words, the coming of the Chinese to these States, and their competition with white labor, is the natural result of the enactment of the law conferring civil rights on Chinamen. This pitiful pretence is repeated daily, by those who advance it were not at all ashamed to proclaim their own ridiculous folly.

In California there are large numbers of Chinese. Ten or twelve years ago they were almost or quite as numerous there as now. That State was then under Democratic control. For the first ten years of its existence as a State, it voted almost unanimously with the Democratic party. It was during this period that the great mass of the Chinese population came into the State. What party, then, is responsible for their presence there? San Francisco was under Democratic control. The Chinese swarmed in her poorer streets and … as numerously as now. They were engaged … in the same occupations that they now follow. If there was less competition then between them and the laboring classes of the white population than there is now, it was because the … still afforded the whites profitable employment, and "hard times" had not yet set in. And when this great inundation of Chinese was spreading over California, the Democratic party was in power not only in that State, but in the nation. They had … of their own choosing and a large majority in Congress professed their political faith. And yet this party which now claims to be the champion of white labor—this party which now claims that this country was made for white men and …—this party which now claims to be the friend of the white man and which denounces … as the advocates of 'mongrelism'—… this white man's party, this party of … whose professed mission now is to … society from the contamination of the …, this party which now predicts the … of white men as the consequence of the … of the Chinese,—why did it not then … and close the portals of the country … entrance of these "hordes from Asia?" … power to do it; the danger then was … as now. For the introduction of the Chinese the Democratic party is therefore responsible. … are in no way to blame. The … allowed them to come, and the Republicans when it came into power found them … these self-appointed champions of … of white men, endeavor to shift the …, and with a shamelessness never … by any other party, try to fix upon their … the odium of their own acts. Do they … the memory of men does not run … as the space of ten years?

… that the recent legislation of Congress … calculated to attract the Chinese to the … Do they who are perpetually … this subject suppose that these people in … country ever read the Civil Rights Act, … privileges, made themselves acquainted with … privileges it was calculated to confer, … immediately resolved to quit a land so … to liberty as their own, and seek happiness in this more favored land of ours? … as this is, it is what these agitators … in substance, every day. Can they … a single advantage which this legislation … conferred upon the Chinese that these people … of the slightest value? Does it give … social advantages which they did not …? Does it give them any advantages … that they did not before possess? Do … avail themselves of this legislation to … which did not previously belong to … Every person knows that the declamation … constantly indulged in, to the effect that … that has arisen between white and … labor is owing to the recent legislation of …, is but the clap-trap of dishonest politicians who are endeavoring by this means to … small party advantage.

… whether the Chinese ought not to … excluded from this country from the … another thing from what we are now … Our object at this time is to show … people came to this coast while the … party was dominant both in these … and the nation; that that party allowed … to come without interposing either authority … remonstrance; that it is responsible for their … and should be censured therefor, if any … is to be blamed, and that the recent acts of … have had no more to do with bringing … here and establishing competition between … labor and that of white men than the same … with regulating the trade winds which … all the traditional Oregon mists every succeeding season.

The Minnesota Legislature has called upon Norton, the renegade Senator from that State, to resign. It addressed him in terms of even severer … than those in which the Wisconsin Legislature addressed Doolittle. It called upon him to vacate the office he had unworthily filled, charged him with wickedly betraying and re… fidelity to his former expressed principles, and deliberately assuming a position of antagonism to the principles of justice and equal … Out of forty members, only three opposed the adoption of the resolutions in which the above sentiments were embodied.

Several States have adopted a policy of taking a census decennially, half way between those taken by the United States. In those States which took a census in 1865, the increase since 1860 has been as follows Minnesota, 44 per cent, Kansas, 30 per cent.; Oregon and Illinois a little over 34 per cent, each, and New Jersey 19 per cent. The figures show that Alabama has lost … per cent. of her population since 1860, and what is very surprising they show that New York has lost one and three-tenths per cent. in the same time. In 1860 the population of that State was returned at 3,880,… and in 1865, at 3,823,813

The Sacramento Bee says that Major Blankeney's appointment as Assessor for that District has been confirmed by the Senate. So the question as to who is Assessor of the Sacramento District has been finally set at rest.

The Union State Central Committee of California is to meet on the 10th of April at San Francisco to take action in relation to calling a State Convention to nominate candidates for the coming election.

Official Corruption.

When Preston King committed suicide there arose many conjectures as to what moved him to the rash deed He was known to be the close, confidant and warm personal friend of President Johnson, and as such appointed to the head of the New York Custom House, supposed to be an easy and lucrative office He soon found it any thing but a bed of roses He was assailed by the needy for position by the vile with dishonorable propositions and left no rest by his assailants All round him was a class of men choking up the avenues of the Custom House intent only on self aggrandizement and deaf and blind to the honor and interest of the Government, which were the ideas this honest, unsophisticated man served with singleness of purpose He sunk under the unaccustomed load, and sought relief in suicide rather than reveal against those who were implicated the corruptions which encompassed his office and thereby possibly compromise his own friends This was the theory of Horace Greely and an article which appeared in the Tribune a few days after this strange suicide, pictured Collector King as a man hunted to his death by troops of insatiate rats

The report of the Committee appointed to investigate the New York Custom House frauds under Collector Smythe, who was second officer under King, and who succeeded the latter as Collector, reveals corruptions in high official places which ought to put the whole nation to shame Sir Robert Walpole, from whose premiership dates the beginning of systematized official corruption in Englands once declared that "every man has his price,' and in spite of the vague but general suspicion of its truth, the declaration has covered his name with infamy But nothing in Walpole's long administration, or in Harley's and Marlborough's, which preceded it, was half so degrading to England as the revelations in this Congressional Report are to American character That "every man has his price' is a terrible sneer at the pretensions of mankind to virtue and incorruptibility, but Walpole did not mean that every man could be bought with gold, like a hog or a hog or an ox The "price," in his mind, when a man high in social or political position was to be seduced from his conscience, was not gold, but something to tempt ambition. It was only the vilest whom he dared approach with gold Here, however, we find that $40,000 is enough to bribe one Collector, one woman, two United States Senators and half a dozen understrappers and go betweens, and the remarkable feature in the affair is that those vile-go betweens got nearly as high a price for their honor as the Senators. Some of them got three thousand dollars, some of them declined that price as below their standard, while the two Senators were to have each, $5,000 The presumption is that the Collector received some $10,000 for his own share The $40,000 thus distributed was stolen from somewhere, and the Senators who each received a share of it, knew of that fact Where was it stolen from? The Committee's investigations show that it was stolen in the name of the Government of the United States, from the importors, who suffered overcharges. This much is pretty clear, but this is not all The inference is that importers know the law and that they would not submit to such treatment without a quid pro quo in some way or another So that at last the speculation made by the Collector comes out of the revenue. And we are by no means to conclude that it was limited to $40,000 That much only is proved against him. There may have been millions besides The man who steals $40,000 would not hesitate to steal forty millions if he could lay his plans broad and deep enough to cover his tracks or to escape punishment. Moreover, the Senator who would accept a bribe of $50,000 to aid in cheating the Government that he has taken an oath to protect, would not hesitate to sell his country to the highest bidder

It is now pretty clear that Gen. Dix (an honest man) was prevented by White House and Senatorial intriguers from accepting the New York Collectorship, and so only that this unscrupulous man Smythe might be retained and used It would be hasty and unfair to accuse the President or Secretary of the Treasury of a knowledge of what his friend Doolittle and his kinsman Patterson were doing; but it was the duty of the Secretary to look sharply after the Collector. Had he done so, the frauds on the revenue could not have gone long undetected and unpunished. At all events, now that the dirty business stands revealed, there is no excuse for retaining Smythe another day in a place where stealing is so easy. He ought to be instantly dismissed from office and prosecuted like any ordinary felon As for the two Senators, if their hands have been soiled by bribes, they ought, when shown guilty, to be at once expelled from their seats. This is a duty the Senate owes to itself as well as to the Government, We trust the Committee may push the investigation to the end, and that without mercy If any parties behind and higher than these Senators are implicated in the villainy let them be exposed, and the Government, without respect of person, be purged of this shameful dishonor. To tolerate evils like these, is to bid high for universal official corruption. The people are already taxed as much as they can bear—more than any other people in the world—to meet the honest debts of the nation. They ought not, in addition, to be exposed to robbery by the public servants of the Government.—Alta

A Chilly Compliment.—Gen. John A. Logan of Illinois, who was very anxious to fill Trumbull's place in the Senate, but couldn't quite come it, is said by the Springfield Republican to have thus spoken of his opponent :

"O, I'm for Trumbull all the time, and for this reason—he can live cheaper than any of the rest of us. When the hot weather comes on, if Oglesby, Palmer, or myself are in Washington, we shall have to buy ice, but all Trumbull has to do is to sit down in a tub of water and freeze all he wants"

Another freedom shrieker and crocodile mourner over the odious evil of slavery and the vices that attend its train, was arrested for picking a lady's pocket book in New York City, and Rev George T. Williams has now an opportunity to whine long prayers in the angelic precincts of the Tombs —Review.

This "Rev. George T Williams" hails from Suffolk, Virginia, and is Rector of a church there, or rather would be if he could escape from the Tombs and return to his chivalrous flock Hadn't the Review better try again?

Poisoned.—The Boise Statesman of the 7th inst, states that Sergeants Shoulderdice and Maguire, and a private named Lee, all of Co F, U S. cavalry, of Capt. Perry's command, were poisoned about ten days before that date, by eating a sort of wild turnip or parsnip indigenous in the Malheur country All of them died and were buried there Shoulderdice was orderly sergeant of his company, and leaves a wife and five children at Fort Boise.

A German of Cincinnati determined on the 4th of February last to commit suicide He accordingly went to the suspension bridge over the Ohio river and leaped off The distance to the water was eighty feet He struck between two floating fields of ice, and after returning to the surface changed his mind and concluded not to drown Accordingly he clambered on a cake of ice and yelled for help He was rescued uninjured

Brownlow's Motto —Immediately under the head of the Knoxville (Tenn) Whig Brownlow's paper, is the following motto, surmounted by the American flag

"Yielding up the other cheek
Dropping humbly on the knees
Closing lips which dare to speak,
Will not do in times like these

English Servantgalism —The following advertisement from the Birmingham Post

Wanted—a general servant in a small family, where a man is kept. The housework and cooking all done by members of the family The gentleman of the house rises early but prepares breakfast himself All the washing is put out, and the kitchen is provided with every comfort and luxury Cold meat and hash studiously avoided. Wages no object to a competent party References and photographs exchanged '

The favorite pet of the animal creation in all Parisian households is gold and silver fish You see them in every drawing room on every shop counter in every window Last year 90 000f worth were sold in Paris the current price per fish being fifty centimes It is easy to calculate that 30 000 cyprins have been disposed of in the metropolis If you add to these 150,000, those sold in previous years, we shall arrive at a sum total of 400,000 fish, that is one for every six Parisians.

United States Army Enlistments —The terms of service of 15 000 troops enlisted in 1864 in the regular army expire during the current year, and the War Department will fill their places by fresh enlistments About 12,000 men have been recruited since October 1st, and if enlistments continue in the same ratio, the minimum strength of the army will be reached in about three months.

STATE ITEMS.

The Grand Secretary of the Order of Good Templars for Oregon and Washington Territory, reports that the Order within his jurisdiction now numbers three thousand There are sixty five lodges in Oregon and eight in Washington

Mr Holmes of Salem, has invented and made application for letters patent for a washing machine From the looks of the machine and the principle upon which it works, the Unionist is of the opinion that Mr Holmes invention will prove a success It works much easier than the other machines we have noticed and as all the rollers and friction washers turn on pivots and rollers the chances for wearing and tearing clothes are done away with

From Rev T J Connor the Unionist learns the following facts in regard to Philomath College situated six miles from Corvallis on the Yaquina Bay road The college building is of brick forty by sixty feet and three stories high It is designed as a wing to a much larger building to be erected in the future The work is so near completed that it is designed to commence the first term of tuition by the first of May The tract of land upon which the college is located has been laid out in lots and five thousand dollars worth has been sold at public and private sale The favorable location of this institution and the indomitable energy of those engaged in advancing its interests will insure its complete success

REFINING WORKS,

No. 416 Montgomery Street,

(Successors to Kellogg, Houston & Company)

CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000!

Directors:

JOHN PARROTT, CHAS. E. McLANE,
WM C. RALSTON, A HAYWARD,
LOUIS A CARNFIT.

LOUIS A. GARNETT ... ... President and Manager
JOHN HEWSTON, Jr. Chemist and Superintendent

THIS COMPANY HAVING GREATLY enlarged their Refining Works, and introduced many other important improvements, are pleased to announce that they feel warranted in again reducing materially their terms of doing business.

THE TARIFF OF CHARGES

Which they now submit to the public—considered with reference to the cost of material and labor—is lower than in any other part of the world, and secures to the mining interest of this coast an important increase in both the minting and commercial value of bullion
Their charges hereafter will be as follows:

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED GOLD BARS

One eighth of one per cent (heretofore a quarter) for all amounts over $1,000, and two dollars for any smaller sum Returns made in twenty four hours

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED SILVER BARS

Two dollars for the gold contained, up to $1,000 and one-eighth of one per cent, for all amounts over that sum, and one per cent. on the silver contained Returns made in twenty four hours

FOR REFINING DEPOSITS MADE FOR COIN OR FINE BARS

On bullion under 300 parts gold, 2 cents per ounce
On bullion from 300½@600 parts gold, 4 cents per ounce
On bullion from 600½@750 parts gold, 6 cents per ounce
On bullion from 750½@949½ parts gold, 8 cents per ounce
Above 950 the only charge will be for coinage But there will be no charge for refining less than two dollars

FOR COINING GOLD

This charge will be the same as at the Mint—a half of one per cent —but which is paid by us to that Institution But there will be no charge in future for making fine gold or silver bars from bullion refined by us

RETURNS IN COIN IN FORTY EIGHT HOURS

Silver contained in deposits for coin will be accounted for at the same rate customary at the Mint.
Gold bars of other Assayers, in good standing, will be cashed by us at the highest market rates
Dust and bullion can be forwarded to us from any part of the country, and returns made through Wells, Fargo & Co s Express.

CHARGES AT U S BRANCH MINT

For the convenience of those not familiar with the terms of the Mint, we subjoin the tariff of charges now in force at that institution
For refining bullion under 300 parts gold, 2 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 300½@600 parts gold 5 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 600½@750 parts gold 7 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 750½@830 parts gold 11 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 830½@949½ parts gold 14 cents per ounce
The charge for coinage is half of one per cent , and the charge for making fine silver bars the same.
Comparing the net value of deposits for refinage, with the proceeds of unparted gold bars sold in the market—assuming that the bars have cost ½ of one per cent —they must be sold at the following par rates to equal the return which would have been made had they been deposited for coinage:
850 par to equal Mint return at refining charge of 14 cents
845 par to equal Mint return at refining charge of 14 cents
865 par to equal San Francisco A & R Works return, at refining charge of 8 cents mh1d2p3m

[illegible] BAR.—It will be recollected that a short [illegible] Williamson in behalf of the United States, [illegible] for dredging out the channel of the Willamette [illegible] Subsequent to the expiration of the time [illegible] and upon the return of Mr. Mc- [illegible] San Francisco, the City Council of Portland [illegible] instructing the Auditor to forward a [illegible] to do the work for a sum not less than $14,500 in [illegible] $9,760 in coin. The first is the amount ap- [illegible] for the work. In obedience to [illegible] of the Council, the Auditor has prepared a [illegible] we believe, of the Committee [illegible] the supervision, [illegible] and it will go forward by the [illegible] this morning. Since the adoption of [illegible] Mr. McCraken has received a communica- [illegible] Col. Williamson, on the subject, in which he [illegible] has been proposed, and requesting that [illegible] of Portland take the matter in hand. He [illegible] that if a reasonable bid be forwarded, he will [illegible] The dredging of the bar at Swan Island [illegible] to the City of Portland and it is [illegible] with us whether we do it—for the [illegible] if the U. S. Government does not—at our [illegible] wholly or partly at the expense of the Gov- [illegible] If we secure the appropriation of $14,500 as [illegible] by the resolution of the Council, it is [illegible] that no great demand need be made, fur- [illegible] tax-payers. It might be said that we can [illegible] for the General Government to do the work [illegible] making any expenditure at all. But [illegible] knows that all Government operations of that [illegible] and a strong liability exists that the work [illegible] to an indefinite period in the future. [illegible] the bar is a constant hindrance to navigation, [illegible] of increasing the cost of all imports, [illegible] obstacle in the way of permanent invest- [illegible] city. It has already, since the late decline, [illegible] the passage of three steamers for [illegible] and until a rise, will detain every [illegible] and departing. Capt. Brown, who [illegible] the Continental, informs us that he dragged [illegible] in the middle of the channel on the [illegible] and that rather than take the chance of get- [illegible] he must, in going out, take the other [illegible] in the sand on one side of it. It is [illegible] that, unless the bar be cleaned out, [illegible] will adopt the plan of unloading their [illegible] point below the bar. It is not the part [illegible] to omit the means, because they may cost [illegible] securing safe and speedy passage for the [illegible] and from our own wharves. In our opinion, [illegible] acted wisely in resolving to become the [illegible] case. And it will act wisely still, if it [illegible] funds in addition to the appropria- [illegible] should such become nec[illegible]ry.

SEEDS.—By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that Mr. O'Connor, at No. 90, First street, has on hand a large and complete assortment of garden, grass and flower seeds. They are fresh from the Landreth seed establishment, Philadelphia, the oldest and most reliable seed house in the United States.

FREIGHT SHIPMENT PER CONTINENTAL.—2,912 boxes apples, 20 bbls beef, 20 bbls pork, 16 hlf bbls dried apples, 3 boxes eggs, 24 bags peas, 1 bbl butter, 183 gunnies onions, 8,074 shooks, 525 bdls shingles, 5,537 qr sks flour, 6 cases furs, 5,000 staves, 9 rolls leather, 31 hides, 21 cases merchandise.

BLOODED HOGS.—Mr J. H. Vreeder shipped on the Cascades, this morning, thirty-six blooded sows for the upper country. This is the largest shipment ever made of that sort of stock from this port. One of the animals, a thorough China blood, weighs about two hundred pounds, and is valued at $50.

U. S. ASSESSMENTS FOR 1866.—The Revenue Assessors for this district have commenced the work of assessing for incomes, etc., for 1866. People should promptly furnish their statements, as that course will avoid all chance of additional cost.

SENT BACK TO CHINADOM.—The insane China woman sent by the Recorder before the County Judge on Monday, was sent back to her friends with an injunction from the Judge that her friends take care of her.

CROWD OF PASSENGERS.—On Monday morning, the Cascades had eighty passengers, and on Thursday ninety, mostly all bound for the mines. The greater part of them came up on the last steamer.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per steamer Alert, Tuesday, March 19th: 4,600 quarter sacks flour, 1,486 boxes apples, 5 half barrels butter and 20 packages shrubbery—in all, 211 tons.

LATEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE STYLES.—If you want to be certain of obtaining the latest and most fashionable styles of clothing and gents' furnishing goods, go straight to Harmon Bros. They have got no obsolete styles.

A WORD ABOUT COLORS.—There are two colors that are very popular in our country, viz: The National colors and the Family Dye Colors. For the former we are indebted to the patriotic spirit of the American people; and for the latter to Howe & Stevens, one of the most enterprising firms in the country. The colors of each neither fade nor run. Sold by Smith & Davis.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.

THE GREAT FAMILY MEDICINE OF THE AGE!

Pain Killer taken internally, should be adulterated with milk or water, and sweetened with sugar if desired, or made into a syrup with molasses. For a cough, a few drops on sugar eaten will be more effective than anything else. For sore throat, gargle the throat with a mixture of Pain Killer and water, and relief is immediate and the cure positive.

It should not be forgotten that the Pain Killer is equally as good to take internally as to use externally. Each bottle is wrapped with full directions for its use. Dyspepsia can be and is cured every day by the use of Perry Davis' Pain Killer. This is the most wonderful and valuable medicine ever known for this disease. Its action upon the system is entirely different from any other preparation known. The patient, while taking this medicine, may eat anything the appetite craves. Sold by all medicine dealers. mh20d&w1m

Bronchitis or Chronic Sore Throat.—It is attended with irritation of the bronchial tubes, which convey the air we breathe into the lungs. The irritation produces sore throat, hoarseness, coughing, and sometimes spitting of matter streaked with blood. If it is neglected it will extend down to the lungs, and settles into confirmed consumption. ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will be found a most valuable remedy for curing this disease, and prevent its running into the consumption. For sale by dealers in family medicine generally. la20

G. VENARD,
CHARTRES COFFEE!
Manufactory Established in June, 1851.
STEAM POWER, NOS. 625 AND 627 FRONT ST.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

There's Work Enough to Do.

The black bird early leaves its nest,
To meet the smiling morn,
And gathering fragments for its nest
From upland, wood and lawn,
The busy bee that wings its way,
'Mid sweets of varied hue,
At every flower would seem to say—
"There's work enough to do"

The cowslip and the spreading vine
The daisy in the grass,
The snow drop and the eglantine
Preach sermons as we pass
The ant within its cavern deep
Would bid us labor too,
And writes upon its tiny heap—
"There's work enough to do

To have a heart for those who weep
The sottish drunkard win
To rescue all the children, deep
In ignorance and sin,
To help the poor the hungry feed
To give him coat and shoe
To see that all can write and read
"There's work enough to do

The time is short—the world is wide,
And much has to be done
This wondrous earth, and all its pride
Will vanish with the sun!
The moments fly on lightning wings
And life's uncertain too
We've none to waste on foolish things—
"There's work enough to do

The planets, at their Maker's will,
Move onward in their cars,
For nature's wheel is never still—
Progress as the stars!
The leaves that flutter in the air,
And summer breezes woo,
One solemn truth for man declare—
"There's work enough to do

Who then can sleep when all around
Is active, fresh and free?
Shall man—creation's lords—be found
Less busy than the bee?
Our courts and alleys are the field,
If men would search them through,
The best the sweetest of labor yield,
And "work enough to do"

"What Was It?"

A TALE OF THE NORTH PACIFIC.

In the year 185— I was in command of the Dolphin, a fine bark of 600 tons We had been on a whaling voyage, and had obtained an unusually good cargo of oil both in quality and quantity. With our course laid for home, the crew in good health, and a fair prospect of per centage money on the cargo, what more could we want to keep the song and the jest on the lips of the crew? Time passed quickly along. "Homeward bound" has an intensified meaning to the whaler's crew, and as we bowled along with a good breeze, each day getting nearer to our homes and firesides, there were few on the vessel who did not feel their spirits rising with each day's progress.

One night about eleven o'clock I was sitting at the upper end of my cabin table consulting a chart on which the vessel's course was laid down. I had been reading Dante's Inferno, and the horrible nature of the work had aroused my sensitive feelings to such an extent that I had determined to try how far a cigar and a walk on deck would steady my nerves. Just as I was about rising from my chair to go on deck I noticed a figure descending the companion-way before me. A single glance told me that it was not one of the crew. No one of my well fed, sleek men could possibly look as miserable as this figure looked, even at the distance which I saw him. Slowly he descended the steps, grasping the hand-rail to support himself as if he were too feeble to descend without support. His back was bent, and his head lay forward on his breast as if he was carefully watching his footsteps; his feet were bare; while his head was enveloped in a piece of old sail cloth in place of a cap. His left arm hung down by his side carefully rolled up in his coat, which had evidently been taken off for that purpose, and the arm itself appeared to be broken. Quietly and without uttering a word he approached me, and at last sat down at the opposite end of the table to that which was my accustomed place. He then slowly raised his head, and a sight was presented to my astonished gaze, the like of which I hope I may never see again. A fine, noble face it was, but attenuated by disease and suffering, or perhaps both. The features had been good and regular, but now the cheeks were sunken and hollow; the teeth, white and even, were firmly set together while the thin, parched lips were drawn back from them. The eyes were as black as coal, but sunk far back into the head, and I saw that they were at once fixed on me with a dull, unmeaning stare The figure now stood up just opposite me, and I felt myself spell-bound to my seat without the power to address it. Having looked at me fixedly for some time, the figure then walked up to my side till it touched my shoulder. Reaching out his arm, he laid a bony finger on the chart which was on the table, and before I could muster courage to articulate, lo! he had disappeared.

Recovering my composure somewhat, I sprang with a bound to the companion-way and shouted for the mate. He speedily replied to my call, and came aft dragging something behind him which kept up a continual howling. As he came nearer to me I saw that it was my Labrador dog Caspar, and I enquired the meaning of what he was doing. "Why, sir," he replied, "the dog lay on the companion-hatch until a few moments ago, apparently sound asleep, when all of a sudden he sprang up with a horrible howl, and ran to his kennel forward with his tail between his legs. I went forward after him, and found him in his kennel shaking with fright, and when I put my hand in to pat him he attempted to bite me. Hearing you call, I dragged him aft with me by his collar, to see if he had not been hurt in some manner, for I never saw him act so before.

I did not examine the terrified dog. I felt that he had seen my visitor as well as myself. With some difficulty I soothed him and then went down below. Walking up to my table I cast a look down at the chart. At the exact spot where my visitor had placed his attenuated finger I saw a dull mark, and on a close examination, I perceived that it was a drop of blood. The mark indicated a position on the chart which was about a day's sail from and at right angles to our course For two hours I paced the deck, wondering at what had happened. The visitor was too surely no creation of my own imagination, for the dog had seen the figure as well as myself, and the spot on the chart was plain evidence. What could it mean? I half determined to ask the mate's advice. He was a firm believer in spiritual manifestations, and would endeavor to solve the enigma in some way or other. But then I had always ridiculed his notions, and it was too galling to my pride to ask his advice now on that of which I had always denied the existence, save in a heated imagination; so I determined to keep my own counsel. Turning in soon after, I slept well and awoke refreshed determined in my own mind to say nothing and think no more about it.

When I got on deck I found that we were becalmed. Not a ripple was on the water. The day passed away monotonously enough The crew slept. I read and smoked, and eleven o'clock that night found me in my chair at the head of the table in the cabin. Caspar, who had quite got over his fears, lay on the hatch at the head of the cabin stairs. I could hear the pat, pat of his tail as a sort of greeting to the mate as he kept ... him in his walk up and down the deck. This evening my thoughts were tranquil, for I was reading a volume of Longfellow's poems, and was in the midst of Evangeline, when I heard a howl from Caspar and the scurry of his feet as he scampered forward. Looking up I saw my visitor of the previous night again descending the companion way. He seemed much weaker, and came slowly down, clutching the hand-rail with his one sound arm and hand. He walked across the cabin more feebly than before, and his gait was heavy and labored when he reached the table. He glanced at the table with an anxious look as if to see whether the chart was still there. It was not. He then gazed at me with a disappointed and sorrowful stare and vanished. I remained quietly in my chair for ten minutes after the speaker had departed When I went on deck I found the mate again endeavoring to soothe the dog, who snapped and snarled in his kennel until it was unsafe to go near him. Leaving him there I went below, and throwing myself, dressed as I was, on my cot, I tried to sleep. Unrefreshing and feverish was the sleep which visited me that night, and I arose in the morning totally unfit for work of any kind My nerves were entirely unstrung What was it? What was it? For what purpose had I been visited? What must I do? Thus I mused the entire day. Caspar kept close to his kennel and all the time and steadily refused to eat or drink When any of us approached his kennel he attempted to snap at us, and appeared as if entirely under the influence of some great fear The calm had continued during the entire day, and we made no progress whatever. Again evening approached and the same hour found me, as on the two previous nights, sitting at my table. This time I eagerly awaited my visitor Would the figure again appear? I found myself hoping that it would. This time I did not attempt to read, for my thoughts were too troubled to permit of my concentrating my mind on any book The same chart, with the blood stain upon it, lay on the table before me. Would my visitor, if he came again, touch that spot, or would he give some other sign which would indicate to me the course I ought to pursue? This time there was no Caspar to warn me, but I felt that the figure was coming ere it appeared. Presently I saw it again coming down stairs. This time it was evidently far weaker than before, for with difficulty could it stand, and it toiled down the steps in manifest suffering and agony. At last it reached the cabin floor and attempted to advance toward me; but no sooner had it let go the hand rail than it sank down exhausted I sprang up and rushed toward it; but the moment I moved the spectre vanished, and when I attempted to raise the fallen figure my hand touched the cabin floor

And now a light seemed to break upon me. I rushed upon deck, where I found the mate and crew setting all sail to catch the breeze, which had just sprung up I immediately gave orders that the Dolphin's course should be altered to that which would bring us to the spot marked so plainly on the chart by the drop of blood All that night I paced the deck No sleep seemed possible to me until this hidden mystery should be revealed We made a beautiful run, and with daylight I hoped to find—What? I know not

The dawn brought a disappointment A dense fog lay on the face of the ocean We could discern nothing at ten yards distance from the vessel's side According to my calculations and by the log we should not have been far from that spot on the wide sea where I hoped to find a solution of the mystery Toward noon the wind died away, and at length deserted us altogether Then the fog slowly rose, and I at once, glass in hand, ascended the rigging With eager gaze I scanned the horizon ahead on both bows but no welcome object met my eyes Disheartened at I know not what, I was about coming down when I chanced to look directly astern Almost directly in our wake, but far astern of us, lay an object, which, by the aid of my glass, I made out to be an open boat I could not discern anything in it, and it appeared to lie like a log upon the water The gig was soon lowered according to my orders, and a mate and a boat's crew were dispatched to inspect the boat as it lay far astern I felt quite unequal to going myself, so agitated was I, but I had presence of mind enough to order some brandy and nourishment suitable to the sick and famished to be brought upon deck I felt assured that my visitor was there as if I had seen him in the boat, but whether alive or dead I dared not speculate Twice I had been summoned, and twice I had neglected the summons On the third occasion my spectre visitor had sunk to all appearance, lifeless on the floor of my cabin Was he dead, or was he only in a death like swoon? I thought over the wonderful incidents which had caused me to find the boat The wind had died away when I had neglected to obey the first summons, nor did it return until after I had received the third call Had it not again died away when it did, I should have passed the boat so far in the fog as not to be able to see it when the fog lifted As it was, we were very nearly out of sight when the horizon became clear Half an hour's more wind and the mystery would never have been revealed Scarce could I restrain my impatience However, there was no help for it I must wait until the gig returned After hours of suspense I at last beheld the gig approaching slowly with the other boat in tow Unable to endure the terrible suspense I went down into the cabin Soon I heard the gig touch the ship's side and the mate giving orders to lower away the chair from the yard-arm Then, I thought, they had found him, but he must be too weak to climb up the ship's side A few moments, and I heard approaching footsteps, and down the stairs was brought, with the assistance of some of the crew, my visitor for the fourth time, but now really and truly in the flesh He was supported in the arms of the mate, but he held on the hand-rail just as he had in the three visions His left arm hung down by his side, and was bandaged up just as I had observed on the three occasions of the spectre's visits.

We gave him proper refreshment and put him to bed He gradually revived and in a few days was able to tell us his story He had been captain of a large vessel trading in the Pacific The crew had mutinied and cast him adrift in the open boat, with nothing to eat but a few biscuits, which were thrown into the boat in derision by one of the mutineers When these were eaten, he tried to eke out life by eating his shoes, and with water wrung from his clothes after rain and heavy dews, he had quenched in a manner his thirst — When found by the mate he lay extended in the bottom of the boat in a death like swoon, and owed his recovery, perhaps, chiefly to the brandy which I had sent in the gig In a few days more we assisted him on deck. Caspar no sooner saw him than he flew at him, and but for my interference would have torn him to pieces. During the rest of the voyage we were obliged to keep the dog chained up. As soon as we perceived the boat the Dolphin had been put on her former course, and now, with a fair wind, we again sped merrily on.

I now felt satisfied that omens and signs were vouchsafed to mortal men for certain grave reasons, and, though not superstitious, I still believe that they are more frequent than is generally supposed. As we neared the port for which we were bound, Captain Williams (for such was the name of my visitor) was one day sitting with me in the cabin, when he asked to see the chart, and he busied himself sharpening a pencil with which to mark the place where he had so nearly lost his life. Suddenly I heard an exclamation from him, which he followed up by saying: "My dear ——, I am very sorry, but I have cut my finger, and have dropped some blood on your new chart, and I see that I have soiled the very spot which I was going to point out as the whereabouts you found me But," he added, in a slight laugh, "that will do instead to mark the place" I have the two charts now, both of them marked exactly alike, one done by Captain Williams in the flesh, accidentally, and the other by — Reader, can you tell whom?

The World Before the Deluge.

A new edition of a work bearing this title, by Louis Figuier, contains profound speculations in regard to the structure of the earth The fact is stated that during the early ages of the globe, what we call climate did not exist Says M Figuier:

"From the equatorial regions up to Melville Island in the Arctic Ocean, where in our days eternal frost prevails—from Spitzbergen to the centre of Africa, the carboniferous flora is identically the same When nearly the same fossils are found in Greenland and Guinea, when the same species, now extinct, are met with under the same degree of development at the equator as at the pole, we cannot but admit that at this epoch the temperature of the globe was alike everywhere What we now call climate was unknown in geological times There seems to have been only one climate over the whole globe It was only at a later period, that is, in tertiary times, owing to the gradual cooling of the globe, that the cold began to make itself felt at the poles This uniformity of temperature was a consequence of the excessive heat of the globe It was still so hot in itself that its own innate temperature rendered the heat which reached it from the sun superfluous and unappreciable."

Hardly superfluous, for without the sunlight vegetation of those days appeared The vegetation of those days appears to have been prodigious

"The lycopods of our day are humble plants, scarcely a yard in hight, and, most commonly, creepers but in the ancient world they were trees of eighty to ninety feet in height The fossil ferns of the coal measures in Europe comprehend about two hundred species, while now all Europe only produces fifty"

The book is filled with illustrations, and has a number of very fine plates resembling ideal scenes in the suggestive geological periods There is one illustration of two hideous monsters—the iguanodon and the megalosaurus—struggling for the mastery in the center of a primeval forest The interesting passages marked for quotation, would fill an ordinary sized newspaper One more must answer It is M Figuier's account of the marine monster, the ichthosaurus

"The country round Lyme Regis in Dorsetshire, has long been celebrated for the curious fossils discovered in its quarries, formed in the muddy accumulation of the quiet sea of the Liassic period The country is hilly—up one hill and down another, is a pretty correct provincial description of the walk from Bridgeport to Lyme Regis, where sleep the sleep of stones, some of the most frightful creatures the living world has probably ever beheld The quarries of Lyme Regis form the cemetery of the ichthyosauri the sepulcher which conceals these dragons of the ancient seas In 1811, a country girl, Mary Anning who made her precarious living by picking up fossils, for which the neighborhood was famous, was pursuing her avocation, hammer in hand, when she perceived some bones projecting a little out of the cliff ... [ex]tending on examination that it was part of a large skeleton she cleared away the rubbish, and found the whole creature imbeded in the block of stone She hired workmen to dig out the block of Lias in which it was buried In this manner was the first of these monsters brought to light, "a monster some thirty feet long with jaws nearly a fathom in length and huge saucer eyes, which have since been found perfect, that the petrified lenses have been split off, as a writer in All the Year Round assures us and used as magnifiers" In the structure of the head the lizard form has been particularly observed As in the Saurians, the nostrils are situated near the eyes, but on the other hand, the form and arrangement of the teeth resemble those of the crocodile these are conical, but not set in deep or separate sockets, they are only arranged in a long and continuous trench hollowed in the bones of the jaw These jaws have an enormous opening, for in some instances they have been found armed with a hundred and sixty teeth Let us add that teeth lost through the voracity of the animal, or in contests with other animals, could be renewed many times, for, above every tooth, there is always the bony germ of a new one. The eyes of this marine Colossus were much larger than those of any other animal now living, in volume they frequently exceed the human head, and their structure was one of their most remarkable peculiarities Before the orbit of the eye there exists a circular series of their bony plates, which surround the opening of the pupil This apparatus, which is met with in the eyes of some birds, and in those of the lizard and turtle, can be used so as to increase or diminish the curvature of the transparent cornea and thus increase or diminish the magnifying power, according to the requirements of the animal performing the office, in short, of a telescope or microscope at pleasure The eyes of the ichthyosaurus were then an optical apparatus of wonderful power and of singular perfection They gave the animal power of seeing its prey far and near and of pursuing it in the darkness and in the depths of the sea The curious arrangement of bony plates we have spoken of furnishes besides, to its vast globular eye the power necessary to bear the pressure of a considerable weight of water as well as the violence of the waves when the animal came to the surface to breathe and raised it head above the waves This magnificent specimen of the fish lizard, or ichthyosaus as it was named by Dr Ure, now forms part of the treasures of the British Museum"

The Farmer that Would Not Sell.—Coffin, in his "Four Years of Fighting" tells the following incident which occurred as our troops were moving to Gettysburg

When the Fifth Corps passed through the town of Liberty a farmer rode into the village, mounted on his farm wagon His load was covered by white table cloths

"What have you got to sell, old fellow? Bread, eh?" said a soldier raising a corner of the cloth and revealing loves of sweet, soft plain bread, of the finest wheat, with several bushels of ginger cakes

"What do you ask for a loaf?"

"I haven't any to sell," said the farmer

"Haven't any to sell! What are you here for?"

The farmer made no reply

"See here, old fellow, won't you sell me a hunk of your gingerbread?" said the soldier producing an old wallet

"No"

"Well, you are a mean old cuss It would be serving you right to tip you out of your old bread cart Here we are marching all night and all day to protect your property and fight the rebs We haven't had any breakfast and may not have any dinner You are a set of mean cusses round here, I reckon," said the soldier

A crowd of soldiers had gathered, and others expressed their indignation The old farmer stood up on his wagon seat, took off the table cloths, and replied

"I didn't bring my bread here to sell My wife and daughters sat up all night to bake it for you, and you are welcome to all I've got, and I wish I had ten times as much Help yourselves boys"

"Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah!" "Bully for you!" "You're a brick!" "Three cheers for the old man!" "Three more for the old woman!" "Three more for the girls!"

They threw up their caps, and fairly danced with joy The bread and cakes were gone in a twinkling

"See here, my friend, I take back all the hard words I said about you," said the soldier shaking hands with the farmer, who sat on his wagon overcome with emotion.

Relations with Relations.—When relations begin to feel out of humor with relations, the disease, if encouraged, becomes monstrous and unrootable Cases have been known where near relations have lived together for years and years without exchanging a word And when death came and separated them, a flood of remorse embittered the last years of the one left, until they were ready to pray to God to send death for them also, to relieve them of their intolerable anguish Even good pious, truthful people are sometimes victims to their bitterness of feeling against their relations They perhaps suffer from the supercilious pride of haughty relations, who, very inferior to them in goodness and worth, yet accidents having made them rich and prosperous, they feel they have a right to snub their poor relations.

LEFFEL'S AMERICAN DOUBLE TURBINE

THESE WHEELS, unequaled and unrivaled in the United States or the world, have been fully tested on this coast, more than forty being in use at this date driving all kinds of machinery, Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills, Woolen Factories &c, &c.

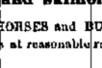

On account of the extraordinary demand, our stock of wheels is considerably reduced, and we are entirely out of several sizes, therefore parties contemplating using our wheel, to be certain of securing them in time, should give their order at least three months before they expect to get them, that we may be able to make them by the time needed

We cheerfully refer to all using our wheels, and are assured that all will affirm that our wheels accomplish all and even more than we claim for them Address

DISEASES OF THE EYES

to call at his office and be at once restored Surgical operations SKILFULLY performed on the EYES for film, cataract, strabismus or cross eyes

Below are some of the many testimonials

This is to certify that I, John D Jodwan, was blind for over nine years and I tried all means of a cure and and many doctors, and all of no effect and I spent all the means I had Finally, I had to become a county charge and when I was taken to Dr G W Brown, on I stated my case to him, and misfortune, he at once commenced to treat my eyes and now I am well, and commend all those that are suffering with diseases of the eyes to call on Dr G W Brown The reason why I do this is to let suffering humanity know where they can be cured

This is to certify that my daughter was almost blind for over seven years and was doctored by other physicians without obtaining any relief when finally I took her to Dr G W Brown, who examined her case, and at once began to give her treatment, and her sight has been entirely restored I do this to let those who are suffering with diseases of the eyes know where they can obtain a cure It has been three years since her eyes were cured, and they are yet sound
THOMAS LIVINGSTON,
Deer Creek Product, Douglas county, Oregon.
Salem, July 21, 1866.

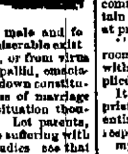

This is to certify that I was blind for over four months and almost blind for one year and a half, I tried several eye doctors but received no benefit, I had almost given my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr G W Brown now of Salem I was induced to try him; he performed a surgical operation on my eyes and gave me treatment I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death, and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good I can see to read the finest print without difficulty, and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

616 KEARNEY STREET NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms Seminal Weakness, Impotency etc Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering but a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cured for and cured before it be too late Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats monomania and frequent insanity If relief be not obtained should apply immediately, either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded free from damage and curiosity to any part of the country with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

L. JAY S. TURNEY,

HAVING LEASED THE ABOVE NAMED HOTEL, is prepared to accommodate the travelling public, and one hundred regular boarders, in as good style as any House on the Coast. He has determined to make the "Bennett" as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem. He will soon complete some important improvements, which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort, and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage

He has secured the services of "Charley" (known to be the best cook in Salem, and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department, and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap trap, pomp and show flummery and fine furniture, but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords

His Bar-room will be kept warmed and lighted and well supplied with newspapers, periodicals and other suitable reading matter, and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort

In short, he intends making an effort to please ALL who stop at the BENNETT HOUSE And he most respectfully requests his friends everywhere to give the old and well known stand at least one more trial before concluding they can do as well elsewhere, and promises if they are not well treated, and properly cared for, and at reasonable figures it will not be the fault of the public's most obedient and most humble servant,
